Food Studies

Hannah Cutting-Jones, Director of Food Studies
412 Friendly Hall
530-327-8479
hcutting@uoregon.edu

School of Global Studies and Languages
114 Friendly Hall
541-346-9780
gsslundergrad@uoregon.edu (gssl@uoregon.edu)
gsslgrad@uoregon.edu (gssl@uoregon.edu)

Food is central to human life. It is therefore no surprise that the research interests of faculty and students across a wide range of disciplines relate to food in some way. In the social sciences and humanities, for example, scholars examine issues including food access and affordability as well as the cultural significance and representation of food and agriculture. In the natural and applied sciences, researchers explore the biological and ecological dimensions of food systems and food-related health issues.

For decades, scholars working in these various fields have highlighted important aspects of food's key position in the human experience over time and across space. Too often though, these streams of inquiry have stayed relatively isolated from one another.

The UO Food Studies Program developed out of a growing recognition that an integrated perspective on food matters is vital to developing fuller understandings of complex food-related issues. Food Studies brings the power of an interdisciplinary approach to widely varied food themes and topics. Such an approach is more than the sum of its disciplinary parts; it provides new insights into the ways in which food mediates social, political, environmental, cultural and economic processes.

Food Studies minors and graduate students are learning about and investigating both global and local food systems, sustainability, and the impacts of climate change on food. Students interact with programs and schools across (and beyond) the university, including the Law School, School of Education, School of Business, the Native American and Indigenous Studies program, and Study Abroad offerings in Italy and Greece.

Food Studies Affiliated Faculty

Erin McKenna, professor (feminist theory, American pragmatism), BA, 1987, Claremont McKenna College; MA, 1990, PhD, 1992, Purdue. (2016)

Galen Martin, senior instructor II (environmental and cultural geography, global food security, Latin America), AA, 1977, Hesston College; BA, 1980, Goshen College; MA, 1985, Oregon; PhD, 2003, California, Davis. (1998)

Hannah Cutting-Jones, instructor (food studies, history of food, pacific history, colonialism, protein), BA, 1997; MA, 1998, Brown University; PhD, 2018, University of Auckland.

Undergraduate Program

Minor
• Food Studies (http://catalog.uoregon.edu/arts-sciences/social-sciences/food-studies/min-food-studies/)

Graduate Program

Specialization
• Food Studies (http://catalog.uoregon.edu/arts-sciences/social-sciences/food-studies/gradspec/)